

C.A. DOUGLAS AWARD

The C.A. Douglas Award will be awarded on an annual basis to an outstanding agriculture extension worker providing public service in the province of Nova Scotia.

One thousand dollars will be presented at the Nova Scotia Institute of Agrologists (NSIA) Honours and Awards banquet in the spring of each year.

This fund will be used for a self-improvement program to further the development of the individual and/or agriculture extension in Nova Scotia. This would allow the individual to pursue further studies related to their extension activities.

The Chair of the NSIA Honours and Awards Committee is responsible for the administration of the Award. The Chair will appoint a selection committee and obtain and review applications annually.

Selection Criteria for Award: The applicant must presently be involved in some phase of agricultural extension work. Agricultural extension will apply to the broadest connotation, such as; agri-business, extension, research, broadcasting, innovative skills and teaching. The Selection Committee would determine the eligibility of an applicant who is involved in public service for the benefit of Nova Scotia agriculture.

Applicants will be considered for both a single achievement or a lifelong dedication to agricultural extension.

Applicants must clearly state the intent or purpose for the award. The Selection Committee will place a great deal of emphasis on how the applicant has considered their future self-improvement, both personal and in the field of Extension. This award is to be used for some plan of self-improvement.

Applicants would be considered annually and must apply on a special application form to the Chair of NSIA, Honours and Awards Committee before February 28th.
